Trials of Spring: Women, War, and Peace Film Screening

Date: April 10 Time: 6:00-8:00pm Organization: WIIS, WCAPS, IFES, US National Committee for UN Women Location: Linder Family Commons Elliot School of International Affairs 1957 E Street NW, Washington, DC 20052

Join us for a viewing of "The Trials of Spring," part of the Women, War, and Peace 2 series releases. Analysis with an expert panel to follow. Film description as follows:

The promise of change spread like wildfire across the Middle East and North Africa in 2011 as men and women stood shoulder to shoulder chanting a simple yet galvanizing slogan: "bread, freedom and social justice for all." Decades-old repressive regimes fell amid a swell of unity and optimism in the region.

P a g e | 4

But almost immediately following the fall of Hosni Mubarak in Egypt, women became targets of sexual and physical violence at public protests. The Trials of Springfollows the ensuing fight undertaken by three Egyptian women -- Hend Nafea, Khadiga Hennawi, and Mariam Kirollos -- to ensure that the goals of the Arab Spring include everyone. They are willing to risk everything in pursuit of their vision.

At the center of the film is the story of Hend Nafea. From a college activist to a central protest figure sexually assaulted by the military, she is determined to seek justice in the courts. Despite criticisms from her conservative family and a meandering bureaucracy, she remains resolute in her vision of freedom: "nation without torture is a dream that can come true" she says. The Trials of Spring offers razor-sharp insight into the disturbing and troubled story of Egypt after the Arab Spring, the human rights abuses that came to define it, and the bold women fighting for justice and freedom despite every effort to silence them.

Distinguished Panelists:

- Gini Reticker, Director of The Trials of Spring
- Eric Hodachok, Senior Program Manager, MENA, International Foundation for Electoral Systems (IFES)
- Haleh Esfandiari (TBC), Former Director, Middle East Program, Woodrow Wilson Center for International Scholars
- Lilia Labidi (TBC), Visiting Fellow, Woodrow Wilson Center for International Scholars
- Scott Weiner, Adjust Professor, Political Science, George Washington University

make it essential for security organizations on both sides of the Atlantic to strengthen diversity and inclusion expertise in order to succeed in our missions. Mission Critical provides a leadership development and exchange opportunity for key personnel and stakeholders to gain new strategies for diversity and inclusion in security contexts. Formats include VIP keynotes, interactive dialogues, and break-out working groups. Please see the thematic agenda here, with speaker highlights forthcoming.

As a key focus area of GMF's commitment to advancing inclusive leadership, Mission Critical will convene 100 active participants from Europe, the United States, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, representing Ministries of Defense, Interior and Foreign Affairs, Armed Forces, Law Enforcement and Intelligence Agencies, the Private and Non-Profit sectors.

Participants are asked to make travel and hotel arrangements independently. We recommend reserving your room at the Arcotel John F. where we have secured a room block, valid until April 8.

National Democratic Institute Event: Men and Women as Allies

Date: April 4 Time: 6:00 - 7:30 pm Organization: National Democratic Institute Location: International Union of Bricklayers & Allied Craftworkers Building; 620 F Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20004

How good are you at checking your privilege? Do you understand the power of unconscious bias? From the corporate sector to politics, equality is still seen primarily as a goal for women to achieve. If the #TimesUp, #MeToo and similar movements around the world are mobilizing for change in gender relations, men and particularly male leaders have to become champions of the effort, too. Join Alan Greig, co-founder of the Challenging Male Supremacy project and Caroline Hubbard, Senior Advisor at the National Democratic Institute, in a fun and interactive session and find out if you're champion material. Cocktails and snacks will be served.

In all sectors, including the political, barriers rooted in gender norms consistently prevent the full inclusion of women. NDI is engaging male political leaders as transformative agents of change for gender equality, A nonprofit, nonpartisan organization, the National Democratic Institute (NDI) works in 70 countries around the world to promote the development and safeguard the integrity of open government, free speech and democratic processes and institutions. It works for democracy and makes democracy work.

innovative policy. With specific policy outcomes and painful personal histories, they have much to teach us about building the security workforce and innovative thinking that the future demands. Again and again, they told us that building networks of peers, mentors and sponsors, through formal and informal interactions, was key to attracting and sustaining diverse talent and new thinking.

Join us to put that insight into action with leaders of today and tomorrow. From 5:00 - 6:30, Rose Gottemoeller, Michèle Flournoy and Bonnie Jenkins will open a discussion of personal experience and prospects for innovation and change in the nuclear security field. A networking reception will follow from 6:30 - 7:30, with some of the women featured in the report.

Featuring:

- Rose Gottemoeller NATO Deputy Secretary General
- Michèle Flournoy WestExec CEO, former Under Secretary of Defense for Policy
- Bonnie Jenkins Women of Color Advancing Peace, Security and Conflict Transformation (WCAPS) founder and president, former State Department Bureau of International Security and Nonproliferation coordinator for threat reduction programs

Moderated by Heather Hurlburt, Director of the New Models of Policy Change project in New America's Political Reform program

regarding trade, investment, diplomacy, alliances, and immigration policy. His election has had consequences for U.S. foreign policy, from reducing foreign aid and pulling out of the Paris Climate Accord, to imposing highly restrictive immigration policies and questioning numerous alliances.

Yet, U.S. foreign policy remains in flux as President Trump's approach evolves, with the 2018 midterm elections demonstrating that many voters are not satisfied with the direction of the country. This situation provides a rich backdrop for debate, now and in the run-up to the 2020 political season, about how to best advance America's interests at home and abroad.

On April 5, Women of Color Advancing Peace, Security and Conflict Transformation (WCAPS) and the Foreign Policy program at The Brookings Institution will host a discussion on the implications of this complex political environment in which domestic and foreign policy decisions influence each other. The discussion will outline how evidenced-based policy analysis and dialogue can inform a comprehensive U.S. policy.

Questions from the audience will follow.

Alternative Approaches to Incarceration Abroad

Date: April 9 Time: 8:30am-5:00pm Organization: United States Institute for Peace Location: USIP, 2301 Constitution Ave NW, Washington, DC 20037

The world's prisons now reportedly hold more than 10.74 million men, women, and children. Imprisonment for even minor crimes is often a default punishment in many jurisdictions, leading human rights organizations to express growing concerns about overcrowding, poor sanitation, inadequate health care, and violence in overburdened facilities. Alternatives to incarceration projects offer a promising means of addressing these growing challenges, and often provide minor offenders with the holistic support they need for rehabilitation and reintegration into their communities. Yet instituting these approaches in developed nations and fragile states alike can be difficult.

P a g e | 10

Join the University of South Carolina's Rule of Law Collaborative and the United States Institute of Peace for a day-long symposium that explores the promises and challenges associated with instituting effective alternatives to incarceration programming. Experts will offer insights from their work domestically and abroad, covering key questions of the day such as how to handle reintegration of foreign fighters, and how to tailor support to meet the needs of vulnerable prison populations. Take part in the conversation on Twitter with #IncarcerationAlternatives.

Youth: The Missing Peace: Exploring Youth Inclusion in Peace and Security through a U.N.-mandated Progress Study

Date: April 11Time: 10am-12pmOrganization: United States Institute for PeaceLocation: USIP, 2301 Constitution Ave NW, Washington, DC 20037

Long before the 2015 adoption of United Nations Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 2250 on Youth, Peace and Security, young people were working to prevent violence, transform conflict and build peace in their communities. However, research on these youth-led efforts is scarce—most literature reinforces a common narrative that youth are either perpetrators or victims of violence rather than agents of change. UNSCR 2250 sought to be a turning point, and its resulting progress study, "The Missing Peace: Independent Progress Study on Youth and Peace and Security," updates this outdated narrative and demonstrates young people's positive role in sustaining peace.

Join USIP and the Global Coalition on Youth, Peace and Security for an interactive, intergenerational conversation with the study's lead author, Graeme Simpson, as well as youth and peacebuilding experts and young peacebuilders from around the world.

The event will look at the two-year evidence gathering process—which engaged more than 4,000 young people around the world and has been heralded as "possibly the most participatory process ever undertaken by the U.N."—to draw out key lessons and recommendations regarding what works in the field of youth, peace and security, and what prevents youth's meaningful inclusion in peace and security efforts. The conversation will also look forward, with an eye toward sustaining UNSCR 2250's momentum and cementing our commitment to the role of youth people in preventing conflict and contributing to sustainable peace.

A New Approach to Preventing Extremism in Fragile States: Final Report of the Task Force on Extremism in Fragile States

Date: April 23
Time: 9:30am-12:45pm
Organization: United States Institute for Peace
Location: USIP, 2301 Constitution Ave NW, Washington, DC 20037

Since 9/11, the United States has successfully prevented another mass-casualty attack on its soil. But despite trillions of dollars spent and tens of thousands of lives lost, terrorism is spreading. We need to adopt a new prevention paradigm, one that not only to responds to terrorism but also prevents the underlying causes of extremism and violence in fragile states.

Congress charged the U.S. Institute of Peace, an independent, bipartisan leader in reducing and preventing conflict, with convening The Task Force on Extremism in Fragile States. The Task Force has developed a proposal for a new cost-effective, evidence-based, and coordinated preventive approach. Modest U.S. investments—if they are strategic, coordinated, well-timed, and sustained—can empower communities over time to better resist extremism on their own and motivate international donors to support this cause. Join us as we wrestle with the challenge of supporting fragile states to build resiliency, sustain progress and prevent future threats and instability. Take part in the conversation on Twitter with #PreventExtremism.

Future of Nuclear Arms Control Series: Is a Treaty-Based System Sustainable?

Date: April 17 Time: 12:30-2pm Organization: Stimson Center Location: Stimson Center, 1211 Connecticut Ave, NW, 8th Floor, Washington, DC 20036

The Trump administration and the Kremlin have given notice of intent to withdraw from the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty. New START may be next on the chopping block. Where do we go from here? If the process of nuclear arms control as we have known it isn't sustainable, what might take its place? Stimson is convening a series of brainstorming sessions on our nuclear future and how best to shape it.

Featuring:

- Morton Halperin, Senior Adviser to the Open Society Foundation
- Michael Krepon, Co-founder of the Stimson Center
- Elizabeth Talerman, CEO of Nucleus Strategy
- Brian Finlay, President and CEO of the Stimson Center (Moderator)

Gender Inequality: Making Technology the Solution, Not the Problem

Date: April 11 Time: 6:00pm-7:00pm Organization: Chatham House Location: 10 St James's Square | London | SW1Y 4LE

There is increasing evidence to suggest that technology is driving a digital gender divide across the world. For example, the Institute for Women's Policy Research have warned that women across the economic spectrum are more vulnerable than men to losing their jobs to automation. The UNESCO Institute for Statistics has noted that less than 30 per cent of the world's STEM researchers are women. And a number of experts have cautioned that artificial intelligence could unintentionally be bringing male-coded gender biases to bear on decision-making throughout the systems in which it is in use.

The panel will ask whether technology can help solve the gender inequality problem it is accused of perpetuating. In a solution-focused discussion, they will explore the ways in which society can bridge the existing digital gender divide. Do inclusion programmes and initiatives work? How can we mitigate abuse towards women on social media? In the world of AI, what projects are being developed with the potential to reduce rather than entrench gender biases? And can women leverage digital opportunities in the future world of work for their economic empowerment? Speakers:

• Dr Urvashi Aneja, Associate Fellow, Asia-Pacific Programme, Chatham House; Founding Director, Tandem Research

P a g e | 14

- Sherif Elsayed Ali, Director of Partnerships, AI for Good, Element AI; Co-Chair, Global Future Council on Human Rights and Technology; World Economic Forum
- Dr Anne-Marie Imafidon MBE, Co-Founder and CEO, STEMettes Further speakers to be announced.

This event is for Chatham House members. Log-in and register on the event page.
